

Research Projects

Ellen Hawley McWhirter, Ph.D.
Anne Swindells Professor in Counseling Psychology
Director, Spanish Language Psych Services & Research Specialization

Current Research Projects

- Critical consciousness, social support, and ethnic identity as mediators of perceived discrimination in adolescents
- Ethnic identity and mentoring as mediators of the effects of perceived discrimination and university climate on college self- efficacy and persistence intentions among Black college students
- Latinx adolescent critical consciousness, ethnic identity, and civic engagement

Data Available from Current Projects

I have several data sets available for use as specialty area projects. Data sets range from 400-700 cases, participants are Oregon Latinx high school students. Each data set includes demographic indicators (age, sex, year in high school, immigration), grades in general, postsecondary plans, confidence regarding postsecondary education, and thoughts about dropping out. Additional variables depend upon the data set and may include: activities while in high school, first language, school engagement, school connectedness, critical consciousness, vocational skills self-efficacy, educational barriers.